Методические рекомендации

Настоящее учебное пособие является завершающей частью курса изучения английского языка в системе дистанционного обучения.

На предыдущих этапах (пособие по английскому языку для дистанционного обучения 1,2 и 3 книги, авторы В.А. Шляхова, А.В. Парахина) студенты освоили грамматический и лексический материал, который позволяет им вести беседу на бытовые темы: о семье, учебе, работе, повседневных делах (покупки, отдых, занятия спортом, и т.п.), а также дает возможность читать и понимать без словаря общеобразовательные тексты средней трудности по страноведению.

Тексты данного учебного пособия дают представление о системе государственного устройства и судопроизводства в России, а также в странах изучаемого языка.

Основная цель пособия – познакомить студентов (будущих юристов) с основными понятиями и терминологией, используемыми в системе правосудия этих стран.

Учебное пособие состоит из 4 разделов.

Раздел 1 включает тексты и диалоги, тематически связанные с будущей профессией студентов: с судопроизводством и различными видами нарушений закона и правопорядка.

Этот раздел содержит минимум терминов для активного употребления в устной речи.

Поскольку пособие предназначено для студентов, изучающих английский язык в системе дистанционного обучения самостоятельно, рекомендуется выполнить разнообразные по форме задания последовательно.

Предтекстовые упражнения подготавливают студентов к работе над текстом. Эти упражнения включают новые слова и выражения, интернациональные слова, термины, объяснения реалий, которые помогут студентам понять содержание текста урока, не обращаясь к словарю.

Послетекстовые упражнения творческого характера направлены на развитие навыков устной речи, а также на активное овладение лексикой по специальности.

Упражнения, тексты, диалоги, лабораторные работы со знаком  записаны на аудиокассете и дают возможность студентам выработать правильное произношение основной терминологии и умение вести беседу профессиональной направленности.

После каждого урока предлагается выполнить контрольную работу, которая включает:

- а) текст для перевода(со словарем или без него);
- б) вопросы для контроля понимания содержания текста.

В раздел 2 включены тексты, дающие представление о государственном устройстве и судопроизводстве Великобритании и США, предназначенные для различных видов чтения.

Предтекстовые упражнения этого раздела нацелены на развитие умений смысловой и языковой догадки и подготавливают к пониманию всего текста в целом. Послетекстовые упражнения носят контрольный характер. В конце каждого урока дается контрольная работа - типовая модель экзаменационного материала.

Раздел 3 содержит образцы составления делового письма, письма-заявления, контракта, краткого резюме о себе. Учитывая ограниченное время изучения иностранного языка, авторы предлагают клише, наиболее часто используемые в данных видах деловой корреспонденции.

Раздел 4 включает русско-английский словарь-минимум терминов, имеющих наибольшую частоту использования в текстах по данной профессии. Англо-русский тематический словарь дается к каждому уроку.

Studies at the Humanitarian Faculty

Peter Smirnov finished secondary school two years ago. Now he is an undergraduate of the University. The University has three departments: the day-time (full-time) one, the part-time and the extra-mural ones. The students of the extra-mural department work and study at the same time. It is rather difficult to combine work and studies.

To become a lawyer he studies humanities: history, philosophy, languages as well as mathematical background and computers. Special attention is paid to specialized subjects. The range of specialized subjects is wide. The curriculum of the speciality includes: Roman Law, Criminal Law, Civil Law, Theory of State and Law, Constitutional State Law of Russia and others.

The range of options is also wide. And undergraduate may develop his or her interest in administration, industrial management or accounting. There are opportunities to study the history of law. The students are encouraged to consider such questions as ethical judgement, political liberty and social control administration.

Undergraduates reading law for four years take LL.B. degree. At the end of studies the student write his (or her) degree work, the theme being taken from International Law, Legal Law, Roman Law, Criminal Law and other subjects. A candidate for the postgraduate LL.M. degree submits a dissertation.

To become J.M. - Master of Jurisprudence or J.S.D. - Doctor of Science of Law - more serious theoretical and practical work is needed. Many graduates of our university administer justice. They work as judges, investigators, lawyers. They discover many crimes and protect the rights and lawful interests of the citizens. You must

HIGHER EDUCATION

Higher education is provided at universities and on advanced courses at polytechnics and other establishments of higher and further education. The oldest and best-known universities are in Oxford,

Cambridge, London, Manchester, Liverpool, Durham, Edinburgh, Bristol, Cardiff, Birmingham. A university consists of a number of faculties: divinity, medicine, arts (philosophy), law, music, natural sciences, economics, engineering, agriculture, commerce and education. After three years of study, a student may proceed to a Bachelor's degree and later to the degree of Master and Doctor.

The Bachelor's degree is given to students who pass examinations at the end of three or four years of study, Bachelor of Arts for history, philosophy, language and literature and sometimes some social studies, or Bachelor of Science or Commerce or Music and Bachelor of Law.

The first post-graduate degree is that of Master, conferred for a thesis based on at least one year's full-time work. Everywhere the degree of Doctor of Philosophy is given for a thesis which is an original contribution to knowledge.

The oldest Universities of Oxford and Cambridge were founded in the two towns towards the end of the twelfth century. The story of the University in Cambridge begins in 1209 when several hundreds of students and scholars arrived in the little town of Cambridge. These students were all churchmen and had been studying in Oxford, at the city of well-known schools. It was a hard life in Oxford for there was constant trouble between the townsfolk and the students. Then one day a student accidentally killed a man of a town. Then Mayor arrested three other students who were innocent and by order of King John (who was quarrelling with the Church and knew that the death of three churchmen would annoy it) they were put to death by hanging. In protest, all the students moved elsewhere, some came to Cambridge, and so the new University was formed.

There were many new quarrels with the townsfolk, for the University wanted to be independent of the Town. Side by side with the fight for freedom from Town rule and another for liberty from Church rule the University became its own master at last in 1500. Now at Oxford and Cambridge the colleges are self-governing institutions.

In those early days student life was very different from what it is now. Students were of all ages and came from everywhere. The students were armed, some robbed the people of the countryside.

Students were forbidden to play games, to sing (except religious hymns), to hunt or fish, or even to dance. All the lessons were in the Latin language which students had to speak even among themselves.

In the early nineteenth century Oxford and Cambridge were the only two universities in England. The cost of education at these universities was high.

Many great men studied at Cambridge and Oxford, amongst them Bacon the philosopher, Milton the poet, Newton the scientist, John Galsworthy the writer.

The universities have their own traditions, which they preserve carefully. A student must wear a cap and gown – it is a custom from the time when students were clergymen. If a student disobeys this regulation he must pay a fine. Students correctly dressed have their meals in the College dining-room and mustn't be late for dinner. Sporting activities are very numerous and popular and there is keen rivalry between the Colleges and the Universities. The most popular sport is rowing.

Academic life in both Universities is full and varied. Students attend lectures given by professors and lecturers, their work is largely based on a "tutorial" system; each student meets his tutor to have his work scrutinized and discussed.

Because of their age, traditions, historical associations and reputation the prestige of Oxford and Cambridge is very high.

How Law Justice is Administered in Russia

The President of the Russian Federation is the head of the state. The Parliament of the Russian Federation, consisting of two chambers: the Federal Council and the State Duma, is the representative and legislative organ of the state. Members of both chambers are elected for a term of 4 year.

The highest executive and administrative body of the state is the Government of Russia.

Courts of different instances administer justice on the basis of the laws of the state. Law is a system of rules regulating relations in human society.

The basic Russian judicial organ is the District (city) People's Court.

District courts try both criminal and civil cases. The district court examines a case and brings in a sentence or a decision. It is a court of first instance. The majority of the cases are heard by the District People's Courts, consisting of a judge and people's assessors having the rights of judges.

More serious cases such as crime against the state are heard by the regional court. The court of second instance examines appeals and protests against sentences and decisions of the courts of first instance.

The Supreme Court is the highest judicial organ of the Russian State. It supervises the work of all judicial organs.

The Procurator's Office is exercising supervisory power to ensure the execution of law by all organizations, offices and citizens of the state.

The participants in the trial are the prosecutor, the accused, the defendant, witnesses, the plaintiff, the jury. The jury decides if the accused is innocent or guilty.

The European Court of Human Rights was established by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and was set up in Strasbourg in 1959.

Its aim is to protect such rights as the rights to life, freedom from torture and slavery, freedom of thought, conscience and religion, the right to marry and found a family, freedom of peaceable assembly and association and the right to a fair trial. The states which are parties to the Convention and the European Commission of Human Rights have the right to bring a case before the Court.

Madame Tussaud's Exhibition

In 1761 a girl was born in France, nobody knew that she would become the great Madame Tussaud, the founder of the famous exhibition.

When she was six years old, she came to Paris to live with her uncle, who was a well-known maker of wax models. In no time she learned to make wax models and soon became so clever at making them that her wax models were better than her uncle's.

In 1795, she married and became Madame Tussaud. In 1802, she took her two sons and her best wax models and brought them to England. For over thirty years she travelled all over Britain with her exhibition and was a great success. Everybody liked her wax models very much. When she was about 74 years old, she founded her exhibition in Baker Street in London. She died in 1850 and left her exhibition to her sons. Before she married she spent some terrible years in Paris during the French Revolution and witnessed the death of the French King and Queen.

Later she made the wax models of them. The museum was destroyed by fire in 1925 and it was destroyed once more during World War II.

New wax models were made by Madame Tussaud's great-great-grandson. So the family has been making wax models for a long time. Now if you visit Madame Tussaud's Exhibition, in this huge collection you can see historical figures and scenes from 1066 to the present time, as well as famous writers, heroes of sport, stars of the cinema and theatre. For people, having strong nerves there is the Chamber of Horrors with the scenes of terrible murders, the scenes of Napoleon's death and Lord Nelson's death and the death of Mary Queen of Scots, the figures of Kings and other famous people and heroes of World War II. One can see their favourite heroes of fairy tales f.i. the Sleeping Beauty.

Text

Crime

When any person is doing something illegal (against the law), he must know that he is committing a crime.

Brown stole Joan's computer when she was not at home. Brown is a thief. He has committed theft. Joan is a plaintiff. She suffered materials loss, and demands reparation of the loss.

Smith robbed a flat when there was nobody at home. He is a robber. Stealing from people or places is a robbery. Smith is accused of robbery in spite of the fact that he denied everything.

A boy shoplifted a box of cigarettes from the store. He is a shoplifter. Shoplifting is also a crime.

Simon killed his wife because he was too jealous. He committed a murder. He is a murderer. Murder is a very serious crime. The accused is found guilty and is sentenced to imprisonment by the court, in some countries such a person is sentenced to death.

Driving above the speed limit a man overran an old lady crossing the street at a yellow light. It is a manslaughter.

A burglar stole some jewellery from the shop. He is accused of burglary.

Raping is a serious (hard) crime.

So the courts investigate all these cases and give punishments for crimes committed. For minor offences one has to pay a fine. For example, if one drives above the speed limit or parks illegally one may be fined. For some crimes there is a capital punishment (death). Prison sentences are given to those who committed very serious crimes. For example, if a person is accused of murder, the sentence will be many years in prison, in some countries he is sentenced to death.

The person becomes a prisoner. He is put into prison. He is in a cell and is waiting for the punishment to be given to him.

Thus courts prevent jungle justice and defend citizens' life and rights.

There are many types of crimes, serious and not very serious. But in any case if a person committed a crime, he or she should be punished by a court (in order to prevent jungle justice). Courts should defend citizens' life and rights.

What is a crime? It is some action which is illegal, which is done against the law. For example, if one stole some things, he is a thief, if anybody robbed a flat, he is a robber and is accused of robbery. If a person committed a murder he or she is a murderer, and as a rule, he or she is found guilty and is sentenced to imprisonment. But in order to avoid jungle justice all countries have courts, and only the courts can investigate the cases and give punishments for crimes committed by some people. For very serious crimes a person is put into prison, sometimes he is sentenced to death.

A wave of kidnapping has gripped some countries.

Frequent police and commando raids are planned. Such raids are to be carried out quickly and suddenly. The police unit freed Monday a businessman and five other captives. But some people are still being held, some of them after months of captivity.

Four reporters were expected to be freed on Monday, but it didn't happen.

Many people consider that kidnapping must be stopped and should be punishable. It is time to clean the society of criminals.

Hijacking Ends Peacefully

Cologne, Germany – The hijacking of an Air Malta airliner bound for Istanbul with 81 people on board ended peacefully Monday when two Turks surrendered at the Cologne airport, releasing their hostages unharmed, police said.

One of the hijackers with what turned out to be fake explosive strapped to his chest had demanded the release of a Turkish gunman, who is serving a life sentence in Italy for trying to assassinate the Pope in 1981.

German police quickly established contact with one of the men through a Turkish-speaking interpreter and persuaded him to hand over what appeared to be the fuse of the fake explosive device to the pilot about three hours after landing.

The men left the plane with their arms above their heads accompanied by police officers.

"We are thankful the hijack ended without bloodshed", Cologne police chief said at a news conference.

The hijackers gave themselves up after about two hours of negotiations, the police officer in charge of the operation said.

"The hijackers made no political demands. They just wanted to attract sympathy in a television interview".

The airliner landed at the busy Cologne-Bonn airport 15 kilometers south of the city of Cologne.

Police named two men as Nosret A., 24, and Ismail B., 25. Police said Nosret had close links with Germany and prosecutors said they were already wanted there.

Prosecutors said the two men would be brought before a judge Tuesday to be arrested on charges of a dangerous attack on air traffic.

WARNING

PICKPOCKETS

Pickpockets operate in many large cities. They are very active in large shops, department stores and markets. They also operate on buses, particularly when passengers are getting on and off.

WALLETS

Carry out your wallet in an inside pocket, never in your back trouser pocket. If you take off your jacket carry your wallet with you.

HAND LUGGAGE

Don't leave your hand luggage including your briefcase in waiting rooms or on railway platforms. Valuables such as cameras, radio, portable typewriter should be carried and you should keep a note of the serial number.

CASH

Don't carry a large amount of cash with you. If it is stolen or lost it is not likely to be recovered. Carry only enough cash to meet your day-to-day expenses. If you are staying in hotel, hand any large sum of cash to the manager for safe keeping and obtain a receipt.

HANDBAGS

Never leave your handbag even for short periods. Always take it with you.

DOCUMENTS

Special care should be taken of your passport, air tickets and other personal documents.

Text D

Shops and Stores

Ensure that your purchases are shop-wrapped and leave them in the paper-covering you are given, until you have gone some distance from the shop or store.

Don't transfer them from one bag to another while you are in the store. Always use the baskets in self-service shops or supermarkets if these are provided.

Check when you pay that you are given a receipt for the right amount of money. Keep your receipt safe until you reach home.

Always pay for goods before leaving a shop or store. Failure to do so could lead to accusation and police prosecution for shoplifting. If items purchased are found to be unsuitable they should be taken back to the store in the store's wrapping with the cash sales receipt.

Text

Who is Who in the Law in the U.K.

The process of criminal justice begins when the police arrests a suspect. Then in case if policemen have enough evidence to prosecute they send the suspect for trial.

In serious cases this decision is made by the Director of Public Prosecutions, who is a senior law official. If a person is prosecuted for a crime in Britain, he or she may meet the following people during his (her) process through the courts: solicitors, barristers, magistrates, judges, jurors.

Solicitors

A solicitor is a lawyer who deals with petty crimes, prepares the case, advises the accused and may represent the client in a Magistrates' Court. When somebody gets into trouble or is arrested, the first person he or she needs to see is a solicitor. Solicitors prepare cases of their clients for barristers, who, in turn, represent the accused in the higher court, if the case goes there.

Also solicitors deal with the civil matters such as divorces, buying houses, making wills, or some other cases.

To become a solicitor a young man or a woman works as a clerk for some period of time for a solicitor and at the same time studies for the exams.

It should be noted that it is not necessary for him to go to the university. When he or she passed all necessary exams, they become solicitors and can open his or her own business.

In England one can see the notice on the door of the office "Mr. Smith, Solicitor, LLB".

Barristers

Barristers are lawyers who deal with the interpretation of the Law. A barrister is trained in the law and in the skills required to argue a case in court. Barristers specialize in representing the accused in the higher court. They are required to help clients in really serious cases, for example, to defend the accused for a crime for which the criminal may be sent to prison. There are barristers for the defence and the prosecuting barristers. The barrister for the defence is usually opposed by an opposite member - the prosecuting barrister, who represents the State.

The barristers of the highest level have the title QC (Queen's Council). Only high level barristers can become judges in court.

A barrister must pass the special legal exams and become a member of legal corporation called "Inn of Courts". Barristers are either "juniors" or King's (Queen's).

Magistrates

Magistrates are unpaid judges. They are ordinary citizens and selected from well-respected people.

They have no legal qualification as judges, magistrates are chosen from people of all social classes and a great variety of professions. They have sound common sense. Magistrates' Courts are the lowest courts that deal with not serious crimes such as a case of driving too fast, etc.

Judges

Judges are trained lawyers, nearly always ex-barristers. They deal with the most serious crimes, such as a bank robbery, a burglary, a murder, and so on. They are paid salaries by the State and have legal training. The judge rules on points of law and makes sure that the trial is conducted properly. The judge doesn't decide if the accused is guilty or innocent. That is the jury's job. But only the judge can pass the sentence. Judges work in the Crown Court.

Jurors

A jury consists of twelve men and women, chosen from ordinary people in local community. They sit in the Crown Court with a judge and listen to the evidence for the defence and prosecution and decide whether the accused is guilty or innocent. In Britain a person is not guilty unless found guilty. The jurors attain a verdict, and only when the verdict is in the sentence is passed by the judge.

I. Прочитайте текст и переведите его в письменной форме.

In London there is the Central Criminal Court or "Old Baily". Some important cases from the provinces are tried there. The legal profession consists of two elements, barristers and solicitors, they must be clearly distinguished. Solicitors, who are sometimes called the junior branch, are much more numerous. When a person needs the assistance of the law either because he (or she) is in trouble, or because he (she) is buying or selling a house or other property or concerned with a question of inheritance of property, he must go to a solicitor. The average problem can be dealt with finally by solicitors, who can speak for their client in Magistrates' courts. If a civil or criminal case is more serious or difficult, or has to be heard in a higher court, a client's solicitor engages a barrister to whom he hands over the task of representing the client in the court.

1. The System of Government

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland is a parliamentary monarchy, where the power of the Queen (or King) is limited by Parliament which consists of two Chambers: the House of Lords and the House of Commons.

The monarchy in the United Kingdom has developed from absolute personal authority to the present constitutional form by which the Queen reigns but does not rule.

The country is governed in the name of the Queen by the Government although the Queen performs certain important acts of the Government on the advice of her ministers. The Queen is also the head of the Commonwealth, and is the head of the Church of England. Also she is the Commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Although the Queen is officially the head of all three branches (Parliament, the Government and the Law courts) she has little power.

The British people look at the Queen as the symbol of their national unity.

2. Parliament

Parliament is the supreme legislative authority and is constitutionally composed of the Queen, the House of Lords and the House of Commons.

The main functions of the Parliament are to pass laws, to provide taxation, to scrutinize government policy and administration.

The House of Lords is made up of hereditary and life peers and peeresses. The House of Lords is presided over by the Lord Chancellor, who is the head of the judiciary in England and Wales.

The House of Commons, which plays the major part in law-making, is an elected body. The House of Commons is presided over by the Speaker, an impartial member accepted by the whole House. The Speaker is elected by the members of the House of Commons.

3. Government

The Government is the executive body which is responsible for administration of national affairs. All the affairs of the state are conducted in the name of the Queen (or King), but it is the Prime Minister, who is the ruler of the country. The Prime Minister is the head of the government. He or she is the leader of the political party that wins the most seats in a general election and forms the government of the country. The Prime Minister presides over meeting of the Cabinet of ministers. Also the Prime Minister informs the Queen of general business of the government.

The work of the government is carried out through the various government departments. The majority of ministers are members of the House of Commons, although some ministers are represented by the House of Lords. All ministers are appointed by the Queen on the recommendation of the Prime Minister.

Local government is carried out by elected council (local authorities) which deal with planning, education, social services, police and many other services in their areas.

Justice and Courts in the United Kingdom

The United Kingdom judiciary is entirely independent of the Government. There is no minister of justice. The Lord Chancellor is the head of the judiciary. Although the United Kingdom is a unitary state, England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland have their own legal systems and law courts, and considerable differences remain in law, organization and practice. However, a large volume of modern legislation applies through the United Kingdom.

The main sources of law are legislation, common law and European Community law.

Legislation consists of Acts of Parliament, orders (rules and regulations made by ministers under the authority of an Acts of Parliament) and by laws, made by local government or other authorities exercising powers conferred by Parliament.

Common law, the ancient law of the land deduced from customs and interpreted in court cases by the judges, has never been precisely defined or codified but forms the basis of the law.

European Community Law is confined mainly to economic and social matters.

The legal system of the United Kingdom distinguishes between criminal and civil law. The criminal law is concerned with wrongful acts harmful to the community. The civil law is concerned with individuals' rights, duties and obligations towards one another.

British criminal justice comprises four stages:

- 1 – making laws which define illegal actions;
- 2 – preventing crime and enforcing the law – largely matters for the police;
- 3 – determining in the courts the guilt or innocence of the people accused of crimes and sentencing the guilty;
- 4 – dealing with convicted offenders.

The criminal law is government-sponsored, but there is usually consultation between government departments and the legal profession, the police, probation and prison services and voluntary bodies.

Crime statistics are published annually and further information about crime trends is contained in the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary.

A wide range of research into criminal and social policies is carried out in university departments, much of it financed by the Government. The principal university criminological research establishment is the Institute of Criminology at Cambridge.

The civil law of England, Wales and Northern Ireland is subdivided into: family law, the law of property, the law of contract and the law of torts.

Other branches of the civil law include constitutional and administrative, industrial, maritime laws. Scottish civil law has its own, often analogous branches.

There are Magistrates' Courts and the Crown Courts in Britain. The courts of the United Kingdom are the Queen's Courts since the Crown is the historic source of all judicial power. The Queen, acting on the advice of ministers, is responsible for all appointments to the judiciary.

Magistrates' courts deal with nearly all less criminal cases and conduct preliminary investigations into offences. Magistrates are sitting in courts without a jury.

The Crown Courts take all criminal work above level of Magistrates' courts. The Crown Court deals with trials of more serious criminal cases, and the trials are held before a jury. A jury is completely independent of the judiciary.

IV. Ответьте на вопросы.

The Police Service in the United Kingdom

British police action in enforcing the law rests mainly upon common concept. British police forces are responsible for law enforcement in their areas. The police of London is in the hands of the Metropolitan Police Force, with headquarters at New Scotland Yard. Outside London most regions have their own police forces. The police authorities are financed by central and local governments.

Police work ranges from the protection of people and property , road or street patrolling and traffic control to crime prevention, criminal investigation and arresting offenders. In urban areas police officers deal with social problems.

Also the police must assist at accidents, safeguard public order and deal with lost property. But the main function is, of course, to find criminals.

The main departments in all forces are the uniform department, criminal investigation department, traffic department and specialized departments, including river police, mounted police and dog handlers.

The Metropolitan Police Force provides certain special services such as liason with the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol). In all areas of police work the use of scientific aids (including A National Police Computer) is widespread.

The British policemen generally do not carry firearms (except in Northern Ireland). Only few policemen are regularly armed - for instance, those who guard politicians and diplomats or who patrol airports. In certain circumstances specially trained police officers can be armed.

The British police officer – usually called the "bobby" after Sir Robert Peel, the founder to the police force – is a well-known figure to anyone who has visited Britain or who has seen British films. Policemen and policewomen can be seen in towns and cities keeping law and order, either walking in the streets or driving in cars.

All members of the police must have gained a certain level of academic qualification at school and undergone a period of intensive training. Like in the army there are a number of ranks: after the Chief Constable comes the assistant Chief Constable, Chief Superintendent, Chief Inspector, Inspector, Sergeant and Constable. Women make up about 10(%) per cent of the police force. The police are helped by a number of special Constables – members of the public who work for the police voluntary for a few hours a week (without any payment).

1. The Structure of the Government.

The government of United States is federal. The government shares its power with the states. The Constitution written about two hundred years ago is the foundation of the government of the USA. The Constitution divides power among the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the government. Each branch is almost independent. The head of the executive branch is the President. The head of the legislative branch is the Congress. The head of the judicial branch is the Supreme Court.

The legislative division is responsible for making the laws of the country. The executive division carries out these laws. The Congress is divided into two houses: the Senate, or Upper House, and the House of Representatives. Members of the Senate are elected to six-year terms, but they are not all elected at the same time. Members of the House of Representatives are elected for two years. They are to finish their terms of office at the same time. The House of Representatives has more than four times as many members at the Senate.

Each state sends a different number of men according to the population of the state. A bill may be introduced in either the Senate or the House of Representatives. A bill approved by both the Senate and the House of Representatives is sent to the President (for him) to sign.

The President and Vice-President are elected for a four-year term. The President may be re-elected and serve eight years altogether, but no longer than that. (A famous President, Franklin Roosevelt, was elected four times, but since then the Congress has passed a law making anything longer than two terms illegal). There are eleven Cabinet officers. These men are appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. The Cabinet takes care of such national business as defence, postal service, foreign relations, money and so on. (There are a few independent agencies which are responsible directly to the President).

2. Local Government

The United States allows a great deal of power to the individual states. Each state has a constitution, patterned after the national Constitution, with its three divisions of power: legislative, executive and judicial. The head of each state is the governor.

Each state has control over its state government. But no state may pass a law contrary to the Constitution or to the United States' laws and treaties. The federal government keeps control over foreign relations, interstate commerce, defence, etc.

Each state creates units of local government. It outlines the pattern of cities, towns and school districts and so on. Large cities have an elected mayor as head of the elected council to help him. The mayor and council have broad power. The mayor-council system is the most popular kind of local government. The elected council keeps the legislative power.

A city government must keep its people protected by maintaining a police department and a fire department. Large cities have health departments, libraries and airports to serve their citizens.

3. The Judicial System of the USA

The third branch of the government is judicial. The Supreme Court is the highest judicial organ of the U.S. It sits in the Supreme Court Building in Washington.

The words "Equal Justice Under Law" are written above the main entrance of the building. The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice (главный судья) of the USA and eight Associate Justices. They are all appointed by the President and approved by the Senate.

The Supreme Court has the right to declare unconstitutional any law passed by the Congress or any other issued by the President.

The right of veto is widely used. The USA is divided into eleven judicial circuits and each one is served with a Federal Court of Appeals. There are about ninety district courts in different parts of the country. The district courts are the lowest ones in the Federal Court system. Most of the criminal and civil cases are tried by these courts.

In the district court where trials are held, juries are used and witnesses are called.

Cases tried in the district court may be appealed in one of the eleven Courts of Appeal and in the Supreme Court. The decision of the Supreme Court is final. In the US the judiciary is divided into the federal and state judiciary. Jurisdiction of particular courts or judges is determined by either the national or state constitutions and laws. In most of the states the lowest courts are the magistrates or police courts.

Movies and Television

The two media of the 20-th century – movies and television simulate a realistic world in which the viewer can feel he belongs, but television has a stronger effect on young minds. And unlike the printed word, which requires reading skills, television's vivid images and spoken words demand only a child's attention.

The major reason children and adults are so influenced by television is that they are exposed to so much of it. Hour after hour, day after day, its messages are hammered into the mind.

The great amount of time people spend watching television. And in most countries TV displays and glorifies violence. The problem is to take violence off TV screens.

Government authorities in many countries must exercise greater control over the violence that television brings before young eyes.

The most violent programs must be kept off the air during daytime and early evening hours.

Taking drugs is another serious problem with the youth leading not only to health destruction but to crime and violence as well.

Evidence Too Much to Ignore

At 9:02 a.m. on April 19, 1995, an explosion turned downtown Oklahoma City into a scene of horror, heroism and mangled bodies.

Two days after the bombing, McVeigh was arrested because he resembled the suspect. No one saw Timothy McVeigh make a bomb. No one saw him confess to the crime. With no witnesses and no admission of guilt, prosecutors placed in front of jurors a set of circumstances that when viewed in succession, appeared to be more than coincidence.

Before he became the worst terrorist in the United States, Timothy McVeigh was a son of divorced parents, an Army sergeant who served honorably in the Gulf War.

Jurors had to decide in a hearing whether the life McVeigh led before he detonated a truck bomb in Oklahoma City - killing 168 people - is a reason to spare his life now. In making that decision, jurors may get to hear from the 29-year-old McVeigh, who never took the stand at the trial that ended in his conviction Monday. They will certainly hear from friends and relatives of those killed in the April 19, 1995 blast - many of whom are expected to demand retribution for the loss of loved ones. Yet revenge is not the same as justice, say lawyers involved in death penalty cases.

"The government will make an argument that justice requires the death of Tim McVeigh", defence lawyer David Lane said. The challenge for McVeigh's lawyers is to convince just one person that a prison term, not execution, would be just punishment.

Lawyers were scheduled to return to the federal courthouse Tuesday to determine what evidence will be admitted during the penalty phase, which is expected to take about 1 1/2 weeks.

The verdict, reached shortly after noon after 23 1/2 hours of deliberations over four days, elicited both cheers and tears from bombing victims and family members in Denver and Oklahoma City. McVeigh sat impassively at the defence table, his hands in a white-knuckle clasp, as U.S. District Judge read "guilty" to each of the 11 counts of murder and conspiracy he faced.

In the courtroom, more than two dozen people fought back tears and many broke into sobs and embraced each other. One man thrust his fists into the air. Bud Welch, whose 23-year-old daughter was killed in the blast, stood in downtown Oklahoma City near the site of the bombing, where cheers erupted from more than 500 people who got news of the verdict on televisions set up on the sidewalk.

"I thought it'd all be joy, but it isn't", Welch said. "A very dull victory. The bottom line is my little girl isn't coming back and I have the rest of my life to deal with that". Sentiments from people like Welch will be presented to jurors during the penalty phase to demonstrate the enormity of a crime.

Prosecutors may show a home video of 1-year-old Baylee Almond's first and only birthday party. The infant became a symbol of the bombing after a picture of her body, cradled in the arms of a firefighter, was published in newspapers around the world.

Defence lawyers plan to call people, who can talk about McVeigh difficult childhood in the small town of Pendleton, New York, his parents' divorce, his loyalty as a friend and decorations earned as an armoured-vehicle gunner in the Gulf War.

Prosecutors accuse McVeigh of bombing the Federal Building. The jurors can sentence McVeigh to death by injection, life in prison or a lesser sentence determined by the judge. If the jury cannot unanimously agree, the judge Matsch can impose a sentence of up to life in prison without parole. If the jury decides McVeigh should be executed, the judge cannot overrule it.

Killings, suicides and accidents: an average of 100 people die by gunfire every day in the United States.

While owning a handgun is a legal right in the U.S., where an estimated 75 million handguns are in private hands, in Japan only 65 civilians – all sportsmen – legally own handguns.

Seventeen people were killed by guns in Japan last year, though Japan has some of the toughest gun laws in the world.

Handguns are illegal: the police inspect homes to make sure that hunting rifles are under lock and key, and possessing a single bullet can result in a $10.000 fine and five years in prison.

Parliament toughened guns laws, for instance, new sentencing for at least three years in prison for firing a gun in a public place even if no one else is around.

A drop in gun crime resulted.

Kidnapped Girl Gagged for 32 Hours

A schoolgirl, aged 14, was recovered last night after she was kidnapped and held prisoner, bound and gagged, in a house less than half a mile from her home.

The girl, Janet Hedley, of West Lawn, Bearwood, Berkshire, was kept in the house for 32 hours before she escaped and ran to a nearby house, where the family raised the alarm.

She was later reunited with her family and taken to hospital for checks.

Mr. Richard Hedley, her uncle, said she was apparently not harmed.

He said: "She had been held against her will and was very shaken. Naturally her family are delighted she is safe and well".

Police launched a big search for Janet after she failed to return home on Saturday.

Last night a Thames Valley Police spokesman said they wanted to interview a man in connection with the incident.

to gag – заклеить рот скотчем

1. For how many hours was the girl kept in the house before she escaped and run to a nearby house?
2. What did the Police do when she didn't return home on Saturday?

How do you speak?

A speaker's manner of presentation determines the success of the speech. If you want your speech to be successful, you should analyse how you speak, because your listeners will pay as much attention to how you give your speech as to what you say.

Check your speech with the following questions:

1. Do you present your ideas loudly enough?

Some speakers are so soft-spoken that their listeners have to strain to hear them. Sometimes speakers also have the tendency to begin loudly and fade out at the end. Remember, please, your listeners must hear every word to pay attention to your ideas.

2. Do you articulate clearly?

Perhaps you speak loudly enough, but you pronounce so badly that the words sound indistinct.

Every sound or word must be clear.

3. Is your voice energetic?

Remember that very few people will listen long to someone who sounds tired or bored.

Your speech mustn't sound monotonous and flat.

Make your speech lively by changing the volume level, the speed with which you speak or your voice's musical pitch.

Work on trying to make your speech sound conversational, and you will find that you naturally vary your volume, rate and pitch.

4. Do you use too many "catchall" words?

Many speakers spoil their speech by using a certain word or a phrase over and over again.

For example, whenever they pause they say meaningless expressions, such as um, okay, all right, well, you know and others like that.

Do you tend to use these catchall words? Work at eliminating "catchall" words from your speech.

5. Do you speak too quickly?

When people are nervous or excited, they tend to speak quickly. If this happens to you, take a deep breath and slow down not to lose your audience's attention.
